The novel opens with Aunt Polly scrounging the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, "Look behind you!" and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly scolds fiercely on Tom's misdeed and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper time and tells his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly asks him if he has been to school that afternoon and what exercises he did. Tom half-answers, but not truthfully. Aunt Polly is satisfied, but Tom's half-truths make her think that he is not telling the whole truth. Tom has sworn to himself to disguise his refusal to answer.

Tom goes out of the house in a hurry. He runs across the street and into the woods. He is interested in whistling. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom encounters a group of boys. They are playing rounders and eventually choose the new comer all the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Tom passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a "white alloy," a kind of marble. Tom almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chooses him off, leaving Tom alone with his labor.

Tom comes home at supper time. He tells all his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly is pleased to hear that he has skipped school that afternoon and went swimming in the bayou. Tom makes a face when Aunt Polly says that his collar is still wet from the water. Aunt Polly is satisfied, but Tom’s bail brother, Joe Harper, says that Tom has never the dish himself to disguise his monkeytail.

Tom goes out of the house to ride his new black horse. He is in a state of whirling. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom is approached by a haggard and agitated stranger. Tom and the new yokel encounter some of the strange men of the town, who eventually chase the newcomer all the way home.
